Monday nearly 4.

Dear Deborah, In great haste I write, for Abby Bigood has just gone from hence. She came just after dinner & has only just gone. She is looking well & is coming here on Wednesday morning next to get you if possible, to go over to Charles town & pass the day with her. Elizabeth Doubleday is going to be there. Mrs D. Abby says was called here but it was while the house was shut up. I told Abby I could not answer for you. She invited me to come, but I told her I thought I should go to Commencement. We had no scholars at all, but one little girl who came to say she was going out of town for a week or two but should come when she come back. Mary Ann called here this morning. Her father is busy looking up a school for her. She seemed a stronger abolitionist than ever. Mary Lincoln is coming here to board. I could not help blowing my blast against her, but I don't mean to open my mouth again. Mary Procter is here & I am all pulled back about visiting her, at least for the present, as she has just lost a good place to come back here. Caroline had a letter from Sarah Ann the other day in which she says Mrs B is not materially better. Her mother is tho' very much as might be expected with Mrs B gone. Maria is going to ride out to Brookline to see the Green's next Thursday. Mary comes in town on Wed. Little Henry seems as good as pie. Mrs Park is gone, went last night. Wenden has got on quite well I believe. He went to meeting with C all day Sunday & we design to take him to the Monthly Concert this evening. John Coffin is out of town. It appears very well & I hope for the best. The Green's are going to Concord to lecture & from thence back to Groton

& then up to Ashburnham Maria approves my pastoral letter & I shall call a Board meeting on Wednesday next or rather Thursday. Strengthen if possible, Aunt Phillis to come in town. There never could be so good a time, & yet her no one is here & we would make her as easy as could be she could sleep with me & all would go on briskly.

There is no need of Lucia & Emma's coming in med with
